This sure sounds like he has more than I do and now I don't think it is fair. Why can't we be glad Microsoft made it so easy for the average person to own a computer. If it wasn't for their innovated ideas and boxing things all together, some of us would never have learned to use the internet. If anybody tries to wrap everything together, it is AOL. Once they install their software on your computer, it somehow connects itself to everything....But that is okay because I chose to use that program to access the web. I have free choice to pick and chose what is offered to me. Let me make that decision and not some other company that is just a spoiled sport.
